this book offers a new perspective on the otherworlds of medieval literature these fantastical realms are among the most memorable places in medieval writing by turns beautiful and monstrous alluring and terrifying passing over a river or sea or entering into a hollow hill heroes come upon strange and magical realms these places are often very beautiful filled with sweet music and adorned with precious stones and rich materials there is often no darkness time may pass at a different pace and the people who dwell there are usually supernatural sometimes such a place is exactly what it appears to be the land of heart's desire but the otherworld can also have a sinister side trapping humans and keeping them there against their will otherworlds fantasy and history in medieval literature takes a fresh look at how medieval writers understood these places and why they found them so compelling it focuses on texts from england but places this material in the broader context of literary production in medieval britain and ireland the narratives examined in this book tell a rather surprising story about medieval notions of these fantastical places otherworlds are actually a lot less other than they might initially seem authors often use the idea of the otherworld to comment on very serious topics it is not unusual for otherworld depictions to address political issues in the historical world most intriguing of all are those texts where locations in the real world are re imagined as otherworlds the regions on which this book focuses britain ireland and the surrounding islands prove particularly susceptible to this characterization the traditional folklore tales of ireland involving the supernatural and the fantastic have had a profound influence on the shaping of the country and on irish literature no other country has produced so many famous authors whose work has reflected those influences these themes were the subject of a symposium held in may 1998 at the princess grace irish library the papers from this symposium are published in these two volumes ninety years ago knud rasmussen's popular account of his scientific expeditions through greenland and north america introduced readers to the culture and history of arctic natives in the intervening century a robust field of ethnographic research has grown around the inuit and yupiit of north america but until now english language readers have had little access to the broad corpus of work on greenlandic natives worldviews of the greenlanders draws upon extensive danish and greenlandic research on inuit arctic peoples as well as birgitte sonne's own decades of scholarship and fieldwork to present in rich detail the key symbols and traditional beliefs of greenlandic natives as well as the changes brought about by contact with colonial traders and christian missionaries it includes critical updates to our knowledge of the greenlanders pre colonial world and their ideas on space time and other worldly beings this expansive work will be a touchstone of arctic native studies for academics who wish to expand their knowledge past the boundaries of north america drawing on nabokov's unpublished manuscripts and letters shroyer analyzes the paradigms of nabokov's poetics and tests them in studies of major stories such as Invitation of a Spring and Invitation of a Cloud he investigates nabokov's dialogue with chekhov and his rivalry with bunin over such issues as the use of narrative closure and the nature of love this in depth analysis places nabokov's short fiction in the main line of his bilingual and bicultural writing career through references to all of nabokov's stories as well as to many novels and discursive writings from the early emigre works of the 1920s to the late american works of the 1970s shroyer delineates the principal historical and cultural contexts that shaped nabokov s development most importantly he reveals the metaphysical ethical and aesthetic concerns that shaped one of the most significant bodies of modern fiction drawing on a rich variety of sources histories hagiographies ascetic literature and records of dreams at saints shrines isabel moreira provides insight into a society struggling to understand and negotiate its religious visions book jacket in the mammoth room of charles willson peale s philadelphia museum the reconstructed skeleton of a mammoth stands beside that of a mouse this juxtaposition write florike egmond and peter mason is symbolic of the two approaches to history which they seek to reconcile in the mammoth and the mouse microhistory and morphology egmond and mason aim to rescue morphology from abstraction and microhistory from the taint of triviality they explore the theoretical relationship between the microhistorical method of paying careful attention to revealing details and the morphological method of looking for homologies among cultural artifacts or texts from different places and times drawing on both textual and visual material the authors offer a series of microhistorical examinations of a surprising variety of phenomena among them a legal dispute between spouses in sixteenth century holland a curious ritual punishment for capital offenses and the reassembly of the peale mammoth skeleton for public display in 1800 along the way they offer an extended commentary on structuralism post structuralism microhistory and new historicism the book succeeds very well both as a theoretical statement and as an exercise in the method espoused the authors have made an important advance in the direction of scholarship the greatest success of the book is in its work of methodological synthesis its ability to stretch beyond disciplinary boundaries to illustrate new possibilities of morphological analysis that is neither history nor anthropology exactly but a nearly seamless merging of the two the scholarship is quite up to date and superbly employed edward muir northwesternuniversity the pursuit of myth has long been an important part of celtic studies are there in fact waifs and strays of ancient mythology preserved in medieval celtic texts do myths reflect a prehistoric world view history or literary innovation and how are old myths refitted and new myths invented by writers in medieval and modern times these are some of the questions compellingly addressed in the studies collected in this issue of the yearbook featuring groundbreaking work on the mythological underpinnings of names in the welsh mabinogi the story of branwen and the clash between britain and ireland the figure of the holy mermaid in medieval irish literature horses dogs and king arthur and the ideological implications of insularity contributors include phillip bernhardt house ranke de vries jessica hemming catherine mckenna and thomas o loughlin
