archaeology in the middle east and the balkans rarely focuses on the recent past as a result archaeologists have largely ignored the material remains of the ottoman empire drawing on a wide variety of case studies and essays this volume documents the emerging field of ottoman archaeology and the relationship of this new field to anthropological classical and historical archaeology as well as ottoman studies how are we to understand past political thinkers is it a matter simply of reading their texts again and again do we have to relate past texts of political thought to the contexts in which ideas were composed and in which the aims of past thinkers were formulated or should past political theories be deconstructed so as to uncover not what their authors maintain but what the texts reveal in this book theories of interpreting past political thinkers are examined and the interpretive methods of a range of theories are reviewed including those of hegel marx oakeshott collingwood the cambridge school foucault derrida and gadamer the application of these theories of interpretation to notable modern political theorists machiavelli hobbes locke rousseau kant hegel marx bentham mill nietzsche and beauvoir is then used as a way of understanding modern political thought and of assessing interpretive theories of past political thought the result is a book which sees the history of modern political thought as more than a procession of political theories but rather as a reflection on the meaning of past political thought and its interpretation it provides a way of reading the history of modern political thought in which the question of interpretation matters both for understanding how we interpret the past but also for considering what it means to undertake political thinking this book is a critique of cambridge school historical contextualism as the currently dominant mode of history of political thought drawing upon michael oakeshott's analysis of the logic of historical enquiry while acknowledging that the early cambridge school work represented a considerable advance towards genuinely historical histories of political thought this work identifies two major historiographical problems that have become increasingly acute the first is general an insufficiently rigorous understanding of the key concept of pastness necessarily presupposed in historical enquiry of all kinds the second is specific to histories of political thought a failure to do justice to the varieties of past political thinking especially differences between ideology and philosophy in addressing these problems the author offers a comprehensive account of the history of political thought that establishes the parameters not just of histories of ideological thinking but also of the much disputed character of histories of political philosophy since rethinking history of political thought in oakeshottian terms requires resisting current pressures to turn history into the servant of currently felt needs the book offers a sustained defence of the cultural value of modernist historical enquiry against its opponents an important work for political theorists historians of political thought and those researching intellectual history the philosophy of history and proposed new directions in contemporary
