in recent decades the north american public has pursued an inspirational vision of successful aging striving through medical technique and individual effort to eradicate the declines vulnerabilities and dependencies previously commonly associated with old age on the face of it this bold new vision of successful healthy and active aging is highly appealing but it also rests on a deep cultural discomfort with aging and being old the contributors to successful aging as a contemporary obsession explore how the successful aging movement is playing out across five continents their chapters investigate a variety of people including catholic nuns in the united states hindu ashram dwellers older american women seeking plastic surgery aging african american lesbians and gay men in the district of columbia chicago home health care workers and their aging clients mexican men foregoing viagra dementia and alzheimer sufferers in the united states and brazil and aging policies in denmark poland india china japan and uganda this book offers a fresh look at a major cultural and public health movement of our time questioning what has become for many a taken for granted goal aging in a way that almost denies aging itself the united nations world assembly on aging has made advancing health and well being into old age a worldwide call for action and this text at hand shows us what researchers worldwide are doing to answer that call here three of america s most esteemed experts on aging lead a global team of contributors each an expert in his or her country to show us what the top challenges of each nation are and what top research is being done there to meet those while we cannot predict with absolute certainty all of the issues that will arise over the next 20 years we can anticipate some and we must start now to prepare for these challenges an expert from the u s department of health and human services warned at a recent un world assembly on aging needed response to the global population shift is not just the responsibility of governments but will be a product of wise long term decisions made by individuals and societies she explained in most nations globally populations are graying and the number of people aged 65 and older is vastly increasing creating a larger segment of senior citizens than the world has ever before seen across human history the elderly accounted for no more than 3 percent of the world population by the year 2030 the elderly are expected to make up about 25 percent of the world population and while longevity is of course seen as a great success longer lifespan for such masses also creates dilemmas for example the incidence of dementia has already increased significantly with an 11 fold increase in people aged 65 and older in the us since the turn of the century and a similar increase in aged people in scotland has researchers there scrambling to find treatments for what they expect will be a 75 percent increase in dementia over the next 25 years chronic diseases that come with aging are already taxing health care systems in the us and around the world to japan with most experts aware their current health systems would be overrun and lack enough staff and facilities to handle the needs of an elderly population multiplying largely in the coming two decades increases in psychological issues such as dealing with the depression often striking aged people are impending too as are social issues such as how families and public policies will deal with the changing shape of the family provides an account of the four stages of adulthood young adulthood the middle years the retirement years and death and dying has photographs charts tables and text related cartoons each chapter ends with an annotated bibliography ends with a glossary and bibliography a humane sensitive approach to issues affecting the elderly memory sexuality widowhood retirement institutionalization death and dying realistic clinical vignettes and case study material woven throughout in this deeply considered meditation on aging in western culture jan baars argues that in today s world living longer does not necessarily mean living better he contends that there has been an overall loss of respect for aging to the point that understanding and dealing with aging people has become a process focused on the decline of potential and the advance of disease rather than on the accumulation of wisdom and the creation of new skills to make his case baars compares and contrasts the works of such modern era thinkers as foucault heidegger and husserl with the thought of plato aristotle sophocles cicero and other ancient and stoic philosophers he shows how people in the classical period less able to control health hazards had a far better sense of the provisional nature of living which led to a philosophical and religious emphasis on cultivating the art of living and the idea of wisdom this is not to say that modern society s assessments of aging are insignificant but they do need to balance an emphasis on the measuring of age with the concept of living in time gerontologists philosophers and students will find baars discussion to be a powerful perceptive conversation starter w andrew achenbaum author of older americans vital communities
