how can suicide be prevented and treated by mental health professionals this book offers a clinical guide to the assessment treatment and prevention of suicidal behaviour from a new and useful theoretical perspective a developmental process approach the book presents the arguments and research evidence that suicidal behaviour is not just a response to current emotional crises but is influenced by persistent characteristics that can be defined in psychological and biological terms the authors bring together research based evidence that establishes three key aspects of the developmental process approach suicidal behaviour results from the interaction between stressful life events and an individual vulnerability this individual vulnerability is itself the product of psychobiological factors genetics and past life events vulnerability in this sense influences how the individual perceives interprets and reacts to adverse life events perhaps leading to hopelessness and suicidal behaviour psychologists psychiatrists nurses and other mental health practitioners will appreciate the conceptual and clinical value of this book based on its description of biological and psychological developmental processes leading to suicide integrating evidence based information from a broad range of disciplines psychobiological definition of long and short tem risk factors for suicide and innovative approach to psychological and biological targets for treatment and prevention cutting edge discussion of implications for the study and treatment of suicidal behaviour by some of the leading authorities in the field this practical book explores the factors that influence children s behaviour in their early years full of insights and strategies for supporting children when their behaviour gets in the way of learning and wellbeing it shows how practitioners can help children to feel secure to explore and learn and to behave socially and appropriately towards others there is also guidance on how to plan positive and child centred interactions when behaviour becomes inappropriate or different in some way including case studies and thinking points in each chapter this valuable text will help practitioners to support each other and develop their own confidence when working with challenging behaviours

this study investigates using the theory of reasoned action and its extensions factors that determine intention to use condoms among tertiary institution students in botswana the data used was obtained from a questionnaire survey of 785 students the findings partially support existing theory for the three explanatory factors of intention were significant without controlling for the effect of each other however contrary to empirical findings in advanced countries subjective norm societal factor played a larger role in explaining intention than attitude although the evidence is mixed these findings suggest that in western cultures where individualist freedom is emphasised behavioural intention would generally be determined not only by personal attitudes but more so by the attitudes of others further the relatively undeveloped economic environment might impose behavioural constraints in several african countries these broader social environmental issues pose critical and sometimes binding influence on the behaviour of many individuals it follows that a study of behavioural intentions in the african scene which places greater emphasis on measuring attitudinal factors may be misleading because of under specification of the causal social environmental perceived societal and perceived control factors
