tucked away in siberia there are furry four legged creatures with wagging tails and floppy ears that are as docile and friendly as any lapdog but despite appearances these are not dogs they are foxes they are the result of the most astonishing experiment in breeding ever undertaken imagine speeding up thousands of years of evolution into a few decades in 1959 biologists dmitri belyaev and lyudmila trut set out to do just that by starting with a few dozen silver foxes from fox farms in the ussr and attempting to recreate the evolution of wolves into dogs in real time in order to witness the process of domestication this is the extraordinary untold story of this remarkable undertaking most accounts of the natural evolution of wolves place it over a span of about 15 000 years but within a decade belyaev and trut s fox breeding experiments had resulted in puppy like foxes with floppy ears piebald spots and curly tails along with these physical changes came genetic and behavioral changes as well the foxes were bred using selection criteria for tameness and with each generation they became increasingly interested in human companionship trut has been there the whole time and has been the lead scientist on this work since belyaev s death in 1985 and with lee dugatkin biologist and science writer she tells the story of the adventure science politics and love behind it all in how to tame a fox dugatkin and trut take us inside this path breaking experiment in the midst of the brutal winters of siberia to reveal how scientific history is made and continues to be made today to date fifty six generations of foxes have been domesticated and we continue to learn significant lessons from them about the genetic and behavioral evolution of domesticated animals how to tame a fox offers an incredible tale of scientists at work while also celebrating the deep attachments that have brought humans and animals together throughout time across the world animals are being domesticated at an unprecedented rate and scale but what exactly is domestication and what does it tell us about ourselves in this book marcus baynes rock seeks the common thread linking stories about the domestication of australia s native animals arguing that domestication is part of a process by which late modernity threatens to undo the world in a deeply personal account the author tells of his encounters with crocodiles and emus behind fences dingoes and kangaroos crossing boundaries and native bees producing honey in his suburban backyard drawing on comparisons between aboriginal and colonial australians baynes rock reveals how the domestication of australia s fauna is a process of unmaking as an extension of late modernity the connections that tie humans and other animals to wider ecologies are being severed threatening to isolate us and our domesticates from the rest of the world it is here that baynes rock reveals a key difference between aboriginal and colonial australian modes of landscape management while one is focused on a systemic approach and sees humans as integral to ecological integrity the other seeks to sever domesticates from ecological processes the question that emerges is how might we reconfigure and maintain these connections without undoing humanity written in the author s characteristically frank passionate and humorous style crocodile undone takes the reader on a journey across both physical and philosophical landscapes this fascinating narrative will appeal to anyone interested in the vital connections between humans and animals this is the first book to collate and synthesize the recent burgeoning primary research literature on dog behaviour evolution and cognition the author presents a new ecological approach to the understanding of dog behaviour demonstrating how dogs can be the subject of rigorous and productive scientific study without the need to confine them to a laboratory environment this second fully updated edition of dog behaviour evolution and cognition starts with an overview of the conceptual and methodological issues associated with the study of the dog followed by a brief description of their role in human society an evolutionary perspective is then introduced with a summary of current research into the process of domestication the central part of the book is devoted to issues relating to the cognitive aspects of behaviour which have received particular attention in recent years from both psychologists and ethologists the book s final chapters introduce the reader to many novel approaches to dog behaviour set in the context of behavioural development and genetics this second edition recognises and discusses the fact that dogs are increasingly being used as model organisms for studying aspects of human biology such as genetic diseases and ageing specific attention is also given in this edition to attachment behaviour which emerges between humans and dogs the importance of inter specific communication in the success of dogs in human communities and the broad aspects of social cognition and how this may contribute to human dog cooperation directions for future research are highlighted throughout the text which also incorporates links to human and primate research by drawing on homologies and analogies in both evolution and behaviour the book will therefore be of relevance and use to anyone with an interest in behavioural ecology including graduate students of animal behaviour and cognition as well as a more general audience of dog enthusiasts biologists psychologists veterinarians and sociologists
