among the many studies of aging and the aged there is comparatively little material in which the aged speak for themselves in this compelling study sharon kaufman encourages just such expression recording and presenting the voices of a number of old americans her informants tell their life stories and relate their most personal feelings about becoming old each story is unique and yet presented together they inevitable weave a clear pattern one that clashes sharply with much current gerontological thought with this book sharon kaufman allows us to understand the experience of the aging by listening to the aged themselves kaufman while maintaining objectivity is able to draw an intimate portrait of her subjects we come to know these people as individuals and we become involved with their lives through their words we find that the aging process is not merely a period of sensory functional economic and social decline old people continue to participate in society and more important continue to interpret their participation in the social world through themes constructed from these stories we can see how the old not only cope with losses but how they create new meaning as they reformulate and build viable selves creating identity kaufman stresses is a lifelong process sharon kaufman s book will be of interest and value not only to students of gerontology and life span development and to professionals in the field of aging but to everyone who is concerned with the aging process itself as sharon kaufman says if we can find the sources of meaning held by the elderly and see how individuals put it all together we will go a long way toward appreciating the complexity of human aging and the ultimate reality of coming to terms with one s whole life this accessible text brings a social problems approach to the interdisciplinary study of gerontology academic research is combined with an empathetic view of the lives of older people to involve students emotionally and intellectually on different perceptions of aging this is the first collection of essays published in the united kingdom to focus upon a writer who already enjoys an international reputation it is a part of atwood s unique achievement that she manages to sustain her popularity with reading publics around the world as she brings feminist perspectives to bear upon personal and private experience and upon the public structures of power which shape individual lives from a variety of theoretical perspectives and including european and north american contributions the essays gathered here explore how as a woman writer atwood articulates the pressures and determinations which condition the feminine before allowing it to speak for itself and how as a canadian she explores the complicated relationships between representation and self representation in a world of vastly uneven distributions of power and responsibility a unique combination of feminist and postcolonial perspectives it examines atwood s poetry and short fiction as well as her novels many disparate academic political and social issues fall under the umbrella of cultural gerontology and this volume brings them together and challenges mainstream gerontology
