this book illuminates and explores the representation of women in soviet cinema from the late 1950s through the 1960s and into the 1970s a period when soviet culture shifted away to varying degrees from the well established conventions of socialist realism covering films about working class women rural and urban women and women from the intelligentsia it probes various cinematic genres and approaches to film aesthetics while it also highlights how soviet cinema depicted the ambiguity of emerging gender roles pressing social issues and evolving relationships between men and women it thereby casts a penetrating light on society and culture in this crucial period of the soviet union s development written with unequivocal enthusiasm for film feminism and theory women and film is a welcome and useful guide to a complex area the arts when most of us hear the title gentlemen prefer blondes we think of marilyn monroe and jane russell s iconic film performance few however are aware that the movie was based on anita loos s 1925 comic novel by the same name what does it mean women adapting asks to translate a jazz age blockbuster from book to film or stage what adjustments are necessary and what if anything is lost bethany wood examines three well known stories that debuted as women s magazine serials gentlemen prefer blondes edith wharton s the age of innocence and edna ferber s show boat and traces how each of these beloved narratives traveled across publishing theatre and film through adaptation she documents the formation of adaptation systems and how they involved women s voices and labor in modern entertainment in ways that have been previously underappreciated what emerges is a picture of a unique window of time in the early decades of the twentieth century when women in entertainment held influential positions in production and management these days when filmic adaptations seem endless and perhaps even unoriginal women adapting challenges us to rethink the popular platitude the book is always better than the movie series fiction about wireless and radio was a popular genre of young adult literature at the turn of the 20th century and an early form of social media before television and the internet books about plucky youths braving danger and adventure with the help of wireless communication brought young people together they gathered in basements to build crystal sets they built transmitters and talked to each other across neighborhoods cities and states by 1920 there was music on the air and boys and girls tuned in on homemade radios often inspired by their favorite stories this book analyzes more than 50 volumes of wireless and radio themed fiction offering a unique perspective on the world presented to young readers of the day the values attitudes culture and technology of a century ago are discussed many of them still debated today including immigration gun violence and guns on campus race bullying and economic inequality before the 1960 s a group of women in southern hunan china often gathered to do embroidery while listening to one of their members chant from a booklet or a piece of paper a folktale an autobiography or a marriage congratulation text written in an elegantly slanted script the men could not read the script and belittled it an attempt to understand the script used by the women called the women s script and the practice of its literacy is the focus of this book the study itself includes the author s collection of 142 documents and thirteen months of fieldwork from interview data to reinterpretations of existing literature in addition to technical and literary studies of the scripts the book focuses on both cultural patterns and social factors chiang suggests that the women s literacy relates to a possible cultural complex found in south china while proposing that gender actually determines the function and nature of the script because this book describes a rare situation in which script use is differentiated by gender it will appeal to those interested in women s studies china sociolinguistics and writing systems
