over recent decades the concept of literacy has been an important field of discussion in medieval and early modern studies and questions concerning the uses of literacy the number of literates differing writing systems modes of communication and the interaction between orality and literacy have occupied researchers from various disciplines the aim of this volume is to introduce scandinavian literacy to the international field of research on the one hand to provide a basis that can contribute to a better general understanding of literacy because of the volume s interdisciplinary approach a relatively wide range of material is invoked to illuminate the subject matter religion and the medieval and early modern global marketplace brings together scholars from a variety of disciplines to examine the intersection conflict and confluence of religion and the market before 1700 each chapter analyzes the unique interplay of faith and economy in a different locale syria ethiopia france iceland india peru and beyond in ten case studies specialists of archaeology art history social and economic history religious studies and critical theory address issues of secularization tolerance colonialism and race with a fresh focus they chart the tensions between religious and economic thought in specific locales or texts the complex ways that religion and economy interacted with one another and the way in which matters of faith economy and race converge in religious images of the pre and early modern periods considering the intersection of faith and economy the volume questions the legacy of early modern economic and spiritual exceptionalism and the ways in which prosperity still entangles itself with righteousness the interdisciplinary nature means that this volume is the perfect resource for advanced undergraduates postgraduates and scholars working across multiple areas including history literature politics art history global studies philosophy and gender studies in the medieval and early modern periods do heads excite a desire to chop them off a desire to decapitate and take a human life as anthropologists have suggested the contributors to this book are fascinated by disembodied heads which are pursued in their many medieval and early modern disguises and representations including the metaphorical they challenge the question why in medieval and early modern cultures the head was usually considered the most important part of the body a primacy only contested by the heart for religious reasons carefully mapping beliefs mythologies and traditions concerning the head the result is an attempt to establish a cultural anatomy of the head which is relevant for cultural historians art historians and students of the philosophy art and sciences of the premodern period contributors include barbara baert esther cohen mateusz kapustka arjan r de koomen robert mills marina montesano scott b montgomery catrien santing jetze touber and bert watteeuw in recent political and legal history scholars seldom specify how and why they use the concept of territory in research on state formation processes and nation building for instance the term mostly designates an enclosed geographical area ruled by a central government inspired by ideas from political geographers this book explores the layered and constantly changing meanings of territory in late medieval and early modern europe before cartography and state formation turned boundaries and territories into more fixed but still changeable geographical entities its central thesis is that assessing the notion of territory in a pre modern setting involves analysing territorial practices practices that relate people and power to space s the essays in this book not only examine the construction and spatial structure of pre modern territories but also explore their perception and representation through the use of a broad range of sources from administrative texts to maps from stained glass windows to chronicles states of emotion were vital as a foundation to society in the premodern period employed as a force of order to structure diplomatic transactions shape dynastic and familial relationships and align religious beliefs practices and communities at the same time societies understood that affective states had the potential to destroy order creating undesirable disorder and instability that had both individual and communal consequences these had to be actively managed through social mechanisms such as children s education acculturation and training and also through religious intellectual and textual practices that were both socio cultural and individual presenting the latest research from an international team of scholars this volume argues that the ways in which emotions created states of order and disorder in medieval and early modern europe were deeply informed by contemporary gender ideologies together the essays reveal the critical roles that gender ideologies and lived structured and desired emotional states played in producing both stability and instability late medieval and early modern cities are often depicted as cradles of artistic creativity and hotbeds of new material culture cities in renaissance italy and in seventeenth and eighteenth century northwestern europe are the most obvious cases in point but how did this come about why did cities rather than rural environments produce new artistic genres new products and new techniques how did pre industrial cities evolve into centres of innovation and creativity as the most urbanized regions of continental europe in this period italy and the low countries provide a rich source of case studies as the contributors to this volume demonstrate they set out to examine the relationship between institutional arrangements and regulatory mechanisms such as citizenship and guild rules and innovation and creativity in late medieval and early modern cities they analyze whether in what context and why regulation or deregulation influenced innovation and creativity and what the impact was of long term changes in the political and economic sphere
