this book brings to light the choral works of three contemporary british women composers elisabeth lutyens 1906-1983 elizabeth maconchy 1907-1994 and thea musgrave 1928 earning solid reputations in britain through their varying compositional styles their music has revealed them to be substantial prolific composers who are representative of major trends in twentieth century british choral composition. lutyens often described as a musical pioneer incorporates a highly personal and imaginative style in her use of twelve tone technique and her departures from the strict practice of serial writing are always highly personal and imaginative. maconchy describes her own technique as impassioned argument using compositional tools such as contrapuntal textures in both her instrumental and choral works resulting in a high degree of chromatic color. musgrave encompasses many modes of expression from her early choral works featuring tonal diatonic writing to a free chromatic style with imprecise tonality at times complete with historical perspective musical examples and reproductions of choral texts this resource of important and little known contemporary choral works demonstrates the diverse approaches used by these and other contemporary composers and contributes to the growing literature on women in music.

this provocative book posits a new theory of women's writing characterized by what claire raymond calls the posthumous voice this suggestive term evokes the way that women's writing both forefronts and hides the author's implied body within and behind the written work tracing the use of the disembodied posthumous voice in fiction and poetry by mary shelley emily brontë emily dickinson and sylvia plath raymond's study sounds out the ways that the trope of the posthumous voice succeeds in negotiating the difficult cultural space between the concept of woman's body and the production of canonical literature arguing that the nineteenth century cult of mourning opens to women's writing the possibility of a post romantic self elegy raymond explores how the woman writer's appropriation and alteration of elegiac conventions signifies and revises her disrupted relationship to audience theorizing the posthumous voice as a gesture by which the woman writer claims and in some cases gains canonicity raymond contends that the elegy posed as if written by a dead woman for herself both describes and subverts the woman writer's secondary status in the english canon for the woman writer the self elegy permits access to a topos central to canonical literature with the implementation of the trope of the posthumous voice marking a crucial site of woman's interaction with the english canon
