building on and extending pierre bourdieu's critique of our media saturated culture this work presents case studies of such diverse phenomena as media coverage of the aids contaminated blood scandal in france us youth media activism and political interview shows on both sides of the atlantic online journalism from the periphery looks at how a range of new media actors communicating online have challenged us to think differently about the journalistic field emerging from the disruption of digital technology these new actors have been met with resistance by an existing core of journalism who perceive them as part of a digital threat and dismiss their claims of journalistic belonging as a result cracks are appearing in the conceptual foundations of what journalism is and should be applying field theory as a conceptual lens scott eldridge guides the reader through the intricacies of these tensions at both the core and periphery by first unpacking definitions of journalism as a social and cultural construction this book explores how these are dominated by narratives which have reinforced a limited set of expectations about its purpose and reach the book goes on to examine how these narratives have been significantly undermined by the output of major new media players including gawker reddit Breitbart and WikiLeaks online journalism from the periphery argues for a broadening of ideas around what constitutes journalism in the modern world concluding with alternative approaches to evaluating the contributions of emerging media heavy weights to society and to journalism

this book is one of the first ethnographic works on small town stringers or informal news workers in Indian journalism it explores existing practices and cultures in the field of local journalism and the roles and spaces stringers occupy the book outlines the caste gender class and region based biases in the production of Indian language journalism with a specific focus on stringers working in telugu dailies in small towns or mofussil areas of andhra pradesh and telangana states in south india further it captures their daily work and processes of news production and the precarious lives they often lead while working in small towns or mofussils the author by using bourdieu s field theory introduces the journalistic practices of stringers working on the margins and how they negotiate the complex hierarchies that exist within the journalistic field and outside it this book will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of ethnography media sociology journalism and media studies labour studies and area studies especially south asian studies this book explores the margins of journalism the peripheral journalists and media organisations who have been overlooked in our efforts to understand a changing journalistic field seeing local journalists as unmapped agents of the journalistic field the book provides a comprehensive study of local journalism in the post socialist post transitional czech media system and conceptualizes these actors as unique agents within the journalistic field informed by pierre bourdieu s field theory it adopts an inductive approach presenting the stories of specific journalists derived from interviews and participant observation in the places where they work alongside surveys of local newspapers from these studies it systematically maps these peripheral journalistic actors their positions in the journalistic field accounting for their relationships and the trends shaping czech journalism to give voice to those who are not usually heard journalists on the margins

this book is one of the first ethnographic works on small town stringers or informal news workers in indian journalism it explores existing practices and cultures in the field of local journalism and the roles and spaces stringers occupy the book outlines the caste gender class and region based biases in the production in indian language journalism with a specific focus on stringers working in telugu dailies in small towns or mofussil areas of andhra pradesh and telangana states in south india further it captures their daily work and processes of news production and precarious lives they often lead while working in small towns or mofussils the author by using bourdieu s field theory introduces the journalistic practices of stringers working on the margins and how they negotiate the complex hierarchies that exist within the journalistic field and outside it this book will be of great interest to scholars and researchers of ethnography media sociology journalism and media studies labour studies and area studies especially south asian studies the public james carey famously wrote is the god term of journalism the term without which the entire enterprise fails to make sense in the last thirty years scholars have made great progress in understanding just what this means in this much needed new book leading scholar david ryfe takes readers on a journey through the literature that explores this most important of relationships he discusses how and why journalism first emerged in the united states and why journalism everywhere shares a family resemblance but is nowhere practised in precisely the same way he goes on to explain why journalists have such difficulty talking about the business aspects of their profession and explores the boundaries of the fields collective imagination ryfe looks at the nature of change in journalism providing sketches of its possible futures ultimately he argues that the public is a keyword for journalism because it is impossible to understand the practice without it this rich and insightful guide will prove indispensable for anyone interested in understanding the practice of journalism this book argues that journalism is a more recent invention than most authors have acknowledged so far the profession of the journalist and the journalistic discourse are the products of the emergence during the second half of the 19th century of a specialized field of discursive production the journalistic field the book analyzes the emergence of journalism and examines the development of discursive norms practices and strategies which are characteristic of this discourse mainstream press tends to give visibility to immigrants only when problems arise through this visibility based on problems a virtual social identity is constructed and given to the immigration population this identity is built on stereotypes and is not necessarily correct however the neighbourhood press of barcelona inscribed within the catalan regional press own idea of journalism offers a different approach to this issue due to its history proximity and commitment to the region and hence the different characteristics of these journalists field where different capitals are sought and taken into consideration and different habitus are found therefore this press constructs and gives a different virtual social identity by using a differentiated set of frames through studying this mechanism the process through which this particular sort of press and specifically its journalists approach the idea of journalism was unearthed and its journalistic field explained the concept of boundaries has become a central theme in the study of journalism in recent years the decline of legacy news organizations and the rise of new interactive media tools have thrust such questions as what is journalism and who is a journalist into the limelight struggles over journalism are often struggles over boundaries these symbolic contests for control over definition also mark a material struggle over resources in short boundaries have consequences yet there is a lack of conceptual cohesiveness in what scholars mean by the term boundaries or in how we should think about specific boundaries of journalism this book addresses boundaries head on by bringing together a global array of authors asking similar questions about boundaries and journalism from a diverse range of perspectives methodologies and theoretical backgrounds boundaries of journalism assembles the most current research on this topic in one place thus providing a touchstone for future research within communication media and journalism studies on journalism and its boundaries
