the history of avarice as the deadliest vice in western europe has been said to begin in earnest only with the rise of capitalism or earlier the rise of a money economy in this first full length study of the early history of greed richard newhauser shows that avaritia the sin of greed for possessions has a much longer history and is more important for an understanding of the middle ages than has previously been allowed his examination of theological and literary texts composed between the first century ce and the tenth century reveals new significance in the portrayal of various kinds of greed to the extent that by the early middle ages avarice was available to head the list of vices for authors engaged in the task of converting others from pagan materialism to christian spirituality in the modern world angels can often seem to be no more than a symbol but in the middle ages men and women thought differently some offered prayers intended to secure the angelic assistance for the living and the dead others erected stone monuments carved with images of winged figures and still others made angels the subject of poetic endeavour and theological scholarship this wealth of material has never been fully explored and was once dismissed as the detritus of a superstitious age angels in medieval england offers a different perspective by using angels as a prism through which to study the changing religious culture of an unfamiliar age focusing on one corner of medieval europe which produced an abundance of material relating to angels richard sowerby investigates the way that ancient beliefs about angels were preserved and adapted in england during the anglo saxon period between the sixth century and the eleventh the convictions of anglo saxon men and women about the world of the spirits underwent a gradual transformation this book is the first to explore that transformation and to show the ways in which the anglo saxons tried to reconcile their religious inheritance with their own perspectives about the world human nature and god
