in terms of the second world war and Britain's wartime strategy three elements deserve close scrutiny the paramount importance of defending the British mainland and its population the challenges of building and maintaining coalitions and alliances and the central role the African continent assumed in all British strategic planning a concluding essay reflects upon the degree to which in the face of an often uncertain and unconvincing approach these critical themes underpinned the British experience of the conflict topics addressed include 1940 and the defence of Britain relations with the United States the British Empire Air Training Plan General Boy Browning and Operation Market Garden the recall of General Alan Cunningham from Libya in 1941 plans for defending the Royal Family Exercise Genesis which turned West London into a battleground for a day in May 1942 and the role of the Eastern Fleet off Africa Andrew Stewart provides a compelling chapter on the loss of the Tobruk garrison in June 1942 one of the worst military disasters suffered by the British Empire during the second world war the essay on Tobruk demonstrates how all three defining elements of wartime experience converged the loss of public confidence about how the war was being conducted its impact on the relationship with the union of south africa a key partner in the dominion wartime coalition and the absolute necessity that existed for deep strategic planning on the african continent subsequently to be realised at the final battle at el alamein this thesis examines the british experience in iraq from 1914 1926 britain invaded iraq to secure its oil interests and to protect its lines of communication to india the british initially defeated ottoman forces and captured the basra vilayet province in december 1914 although basra s capture accomplished the objectives that britain had sought to achieve at the outset of the campaign it was followed by an ill advised advance to baghdad that culminated in defeat by the ottomans at kut al amara in 1916 the british regrouped however and resumed the offensive capturing baghdad in 1917 and mosul in 1918 after the war britain managed iraq as a league of nations mandate from 1920 1932 the british installed iraq s first ruler king feisal i in 1921 and helped demarcate its northern border with turkey in 1926 this thesis explores the british military campaign in iraq during world war i and its subsequent civil administration the thesis will examine the actions britain took during this time period and determine what wisdom if any that the united states us can draw from these experiences in relation to its current efforts in iraq this study concludes that if the us is going to accomplish its objectives in iraq it should base its future relationship with iraq primarily by incentives and not coercion furthermore any attempt by the us to simultaneously develop iraq into an independent nation state and maintain dominant long term influence will likely result in failure overall if the us wants to accomplish its goals in iraq it should treat iraq like an equal and strive to be the best friend it has never had
