moral behavior does not begin and end with religion but is in fact a product of evolution in light of the potential novel applications of neurotechnologies in psychiatry and the current debate on moral bioenhancement this book outlines the reasons why more conceptual work is needed to inform the scientific and medical community and society at large about the implications of moral bioenhancement before a possible highly hypothetical at this point broad acceptance and potential implementation in areas such as psychiatry e g treatment of psychopathy or as a measure to prevent crime in society the author does not negate the possibility of altering or manipulating moral behavior through technological means rather he argues that the scope of interventions is limited because the various options available to enhance morality improve or simply manipulate some elements of moral behavior and not the moral agent per se in the various elements constitutive of moral agency the concept of identity integrity is suggested as a potential framework for a responsible use of neurotechnologies in psychiatry to avoid human beings becoming orderers and orderables of technological manipulations for humanists the perfect language was a revived classical latin for scholastics it was a practical logic adapted to the needs of education though they have long been portrayed as arch rivals alan perreiah here argues that humanists and scholastics were working in complementary ways toward some of the same goals most significantly the early modern search for the perfect language the study advances research on language pedagogy in the renaissance by clarifying the connections between truth and translation together daisaku ikeda and josef derbulav explore a wide range of topics starting with a discussion of the tension between tradition and modernization in japan and elsewhere they compare humanism in east and west and buddhism and christianity focusing on the crucial topic of education they consider the roles of ethics and religion and zero in on concrete problems and issues education and political authority absenteeism violence in schools and juvenile delinquency in this lively and illuminating discussion of his landmark research esteemed primatologist frans de waal argues that human morality is not imposed from above but instead comes from within moral behavior does not begin and end with religion but is in fact a product of evolution for many years de waal has observed chimpanzees soothe distressed neighbors and bonobos share their food now he delivers fascinating fresh evidence for the seeds of ethical behavior in primate societies that further cements the case for the biological origins of human fairness interweaving vivid tales from the animal kingdom with thoughtful philosophical analysis de waal seeks a bottom up explanation of morality that emphasizes our connection with animals in doing so de waal explores for the first time the implications of his work for our understanding of modern religion whatever the role of religious moral imperatives he sees it as a johnny come lately role that emerged only as an addition to our natural instincts for cooperation and empathy but unlike the dogmatic neo atheist of his book's title de waal does not scorn religion per se instead he draws on the long tradition of humanism exemplified by the painter hieronymus bosch and asks reflective readers to consider these issues from a positive perspective what role if any does religion play for a well functioning society today and where can believers and nonbelievers alike find the inspiration to lead a good life rich with cultural references and anecdotes of primate behavior the bonobo and the atheist engagingly builds a unique argument grounded in evolutionary biology and moral philosophy ever a pioneering thinker de waal delivers a heartening and inclusive new perspective on human nature and our struggle to find purpose in our lives
