echoing events questions the perpetuation actualization and canonization of national narratives in english and dutch history textbooks wide reaching media that tendentially inspire a sense of meaning memory and thus also identity the longitudinal study begins in the 1920s when the league of nations launched several initiatives to reduce strong nationalistic visions in textbooks and ends in the new millennium with the revival of national narratives in both countries the analysis shows how and why textbook authors have narrated different histories which vary in terms of context epoch and place as echoing events by using recurring plots and the same combinations of historical analogies this innovative and original study thus investigates from a new angle the resistance of national narratives to change the launch of a new book series is always a challenging event not only for the editorial board and the publisher but also and more particularly for the first author both the editorial board and the publisher are delighted that the first author in this series is well able to meet the challenge professor freudenthal needs no introduction to anyone in the mathematics education field and it is particularly fitting that his book should be the first in this new series because it was in 1968 that he and reidel produced the first issue of the journal educational studies in mathematics breaking fresh ground is therefore nothing new to professor freudenthal and this book illustrates well his pleasure at such a task to be strictly correct the ground which he has broken here is not new but as with mathematics as an educational task and weeding and sowing it is rather the novelty of the manner in which he has carried out his analysis which provides us with so many fresh perspectives it is our intention that this new book series should provide those who work in the emerging discipline of mathematics education with an essential resource and at a time of considerable concern about the whole mathematics curriculum this book represents just such a resource alan j bishop managing editor vii a look backward and a look forward men die systems last the international new math developments between about 1950 through 1980 are regarded by many mathematics educators and education historians as the most historically important development in curricula of the twentieth century it attracted the attention of local and international politicians of teachers and of parents and influenced the teaching and learning of mathematics at all levels kindergarten to college graduate in many nations after garnering much initial support it began to attract criticism but as bill jacob and the late jerry becker show in chapter 17 some of the effects became entrenched this volume edited by professor dirk de bock of belgium provides an outstanding overview of the new math modern mathematics movement chapter authors provide exceptionally high quality analyses of the rise of the movement and of subsequent developments within a range of nations the first few chapters show how the initial leadership came from mathematicians in european nations and in the united states of america the background leaders in europe were caleb gattegno and members of a mysterious group of mainly french pure mathematicians who since the 1930s had published under the name of a fictitious nicolas bourbaki in the united states there emerged during the 1950s various attempts to improve u s mathematics curricula and teaching especially in secondary schools and colleges this side of the story climaxed in 1957 when the soviet union succeeded in launching sputnik the first satellite undoubtedly this is a landmark publication in education the foreword was written by professor bob moon one of a few other scholars to have written on the new math from an international perspective the final epilogue chapter by professor geert vanpaemel a historian draws together the overall thrust of the volume and makes links with the general history of curriculum development especially in science education including recent globalization trends
