the present work is the outcome of a wish expressed to me from more than one quarter that i would reprint in a collected form for the convenience of historical students some more results of my researches in the history of the eleventh and twelfth centuries but to these i have added especially on domesday so much which has not yet seen the light that the greater portion of the work is new while the rest has been in part re written the object i have set before myself throughout is either to add to or correct our existing knowledge of facts and for this i have gone in the main to records whether in manuscript or in print it is my hope that the papers in this volume may further illustrate the value of such evidence as supplementing and checking the chroniclers for what is still in many respects an obscure period of our history to those in search of new light on our early mediaeval history i commend the first portion of this work as setting forth for their careful consideration views as evolutionary on the domesday hide and the whole system of land assessment as on the actual introduction of the feudal system into england although i have here brought into conjunction my discovery that the assessment of knight service was based on a five knights unit irrespective of area or value and my theory that the original assessment of land was based on a five hides unit not calculated on area or value yet the two one need hardly add are of course unconnected the one was an anglo saxon system and as i maintain of early date the other was of norman introduction and of independent origin my theories were formed at different times as the result of wholly separate investigations that of the five hides unit was arrived at several years ago but was kept back in the hope that i might light on some really satisfactory explanation of the phenomena presented the solution i now propound can only be deemed tentative i would hope however that the theories i advance may stimulate others to approach the subject and above all that they may indicate to local students in the future the lines on which they should work and the absolute need of their assistance perhaps the most important conclusion to which my researches point is that domesday reveals the existence of two separate systems in england co extensive with two nationalities the original five hides of the anglo saxon in the south and the later six carucates of the danish invaders in the north Ê
