cuban art in the twentieth century is an historical progression of works by important artists from a complex modern movement described by several discrete periods colonial early republic first generation second generation third generation late modern and contemporary periods the cuban modern art movement consists of a loose group of artists divided into generations who counted on the moral support of an intellectual elite and who had minimal economic help from the private and public sectors in spite of a fragile infrastructure this art movement along with similar movements in literature and music played a major role in defining cuban culture in the twentieth century focusing on a period of history rocked by four armed movements lillian guerra traces the origins of cubans struggles to determine the meaning of their identity and the character of the state from cuba s last war of independence in 1895 to the consolidation of u s neocolonial hegemony in 1921 guerra argues that political violence and competing interpretations of the social unity proposed by cuba s revolutionary patriot josé martí reveal conflicting visions of the nation visions that differ in their ideological radicalism and in how they cast cuba s relationship with the united states as guerra explains some nationalists supported incorporating foreign investment and values while others sought social change through the application of an authoritarian model of electoral politics still others sought a democratic government with social and economic justice but for all factions the image of martí became the principal means by which cubans attacked policed and discredited one another to preserve their own vision over others guerra s examination demonstrates how competing historical memories and battles for control of a weak state explain why polarity rather than consensus on the idea of the nation and the character of the cuban state came to define cuban politics throughout the twentieth century
