in this book david lyon analyses the various contexts of surveillance activity and offers a balanced account of the influence electronic information systems have on the social order today in what ways does contemporary surveillance reinforce social divisions how are police and consumer surveillance becoming more similar as they are automated are we forced to choose between classical and poststructuralist approaches in explaining surveillance why is surveillance both expanding globally and focusing more on the human body surveillance society takes a post privacy approach to surveillance with a fresh look at the relations between technology and society personal data is collected from us all the time whether we know it or not through identity numbers camera images or increasingly by other means such as fingerprint and retinal scans this book examines the constant computer based scrutiny of ordinary daily life for citizens and consumers as they participate in contemporary societies it argues that to understand what is happening we have to go beyond orwellian alarms and cries for more privacy to see how such surveillance also reinforces divisions by sorting people into social categories the issues spill over narrow policy and legal boundaries to generate responses at several levels including local consumer groups internet activism and international social movements in this fascinating study sociologies of new technology and social theories of surveillance are illustrated with examples from north america europe and pacific asia david lyon provides an invaluable text for undergraduate and postgraduate sociology courses both in social theory and in science technology and society it will also appeal much more widely for example to those with an interest in politics social control human geography and public administration personal data is collected from us all the time through identity numbers camera images or by other means such as fingerprint and retinal scans this book examines the constant computer based scrutiny of ordinary daily life for citizens and consumers as they participate in contemporary societies examines thoughts about self surveillance scrutiny of specific parts of society sophisticated data gathering techniques and the ubiquity of cctv this book is suitable for students of sociology politics social policy media and communications studies social psychology and criminology we live in a surveillance society anyone who uses a credit card cell phone or even search engines to navigate the is being monitored and assessed and often in ways that are imperceptible to us the first general introduction to the growing field of surveillance studies supervision uses examples drawn from everyday technologies to show how surveillance is used who is using it and how it affects our world beginning with a look at the activities and technologies that connect most people to the surveillance matrix from identification cards to gps devices in our cars to facebook john gilliom and torin monahan invite readers to critically explore surveillance as it relates to issues of law power freedom and inequality even if you avoid using credit cards and stay off facebook they show going to work or school inevitably embeds you in surveillance relationships finally they discuss the more obvious forms of surveillance including the security systems used at airports and on city streets which both epitomize contemporary surveillance and make impossibly grand promises of safety and security gilliom and monahan are among the foremost experts on surveillance and society and with supervision they offer an immensely accessible and engaging guide giving readers the tools to understand and to question how deeply surveillance has been woven into the fabric of our everyday lives the use of closed circuit television or cctv has dramatically increased over the past decade but its presence is often so subtle as to go unnoticed should we unthinkingly accept that increased surveillance is in the public s best interests or does this mean that big brother is finally watching us this book asks provocative questions about the rise of the maximum surveillance society is crime control the principal motivation behind increased surveillance or are the reasons more complex does surveillance violate peoples right of privacy who gets surveilled and why what are its implications for social control does surveillance actually reduce crime what will developments in technology mean for the future of surveillance what rights do individuals under surveillance have how is the information gathered through cctv used by the authorities based on extensive fieldwork on automated surveillance in britain over a two year period this book not only attempts to answer these vexing questions but also provides a wealth of detailed information about the reasoning behind and effects of social control today s surveillance society emerged from a complex of military and corporate priorities that were nourished through the active and cold wars that marked the twentieth century two massive configurations of power state and corporate have become the dominant players mass targeted surveillance deep within corporate governmental and social structures is now both normal and legitimate the surveillance industrial complex examines the intersections of capital and the neo liberal state in promoting the emergence and growth of the surveillance society the chapters in this volume written by internationally known surveillance scholars from a number of disciplines trace the connections between the massive multinational conglomerates that manufacture distribute and promote technologies of surveillance and the institutions of social control and civil society in three parts this collection investigates how the surveillance industrial complex spans international boundaries through the workings of global capital and its interaction with agencies of the state surveillance as an organizational control process perpetuating the interests and voices of certain actors and weakening or silencing others how local political economies shape the deployment and distribution of the massive interactions of global capital military that comprise surveillance systems today this volume will be useful for students and scholars of sociology management business criminology geography and international studies this volume analyses the role of civil society in the reform and oversight of the security sector in post communist countries as a key aspect of the transition towards democracy it is widely accepted that civil society actors have an important contribution to make in the governance of the security sector however that specific role has not been subject to much close or comparative examination this book constitutes an attempt to examine and compare experiences of civil society participation in security oversight across central and eastern europe the first part of the volume presents the reader with the theoretical and conceptual background against which the potential role of civil society in security sector governance can be understood and assessed the remainder of the book is comprised of nine country studies of civil society engagement with the security sector reviewing developments over the past 15 years of regime transformation in the region the book draws upon a rich variety of cases that cast light on the different experiences challenges and successes of civil society actors and the media in democratisation security sector reform and the exercise of democratic oversight of the security sector this publication presents a collection of academic work associated with the third annual conference of the living in surveillance societies liss cost action iso807 which took place at the universitat oberta de catalunya barcelona spain between 29 may and 1 june 2012 the conference was chaired by professor william webster and dr gemmagaldon clavell and incorporated conference themed panel sessions workshops a doctoral school and sessions open to the general public in total over

50 academic papers were presented and over 70 delegates participated in the event these activities have been captured in this edition in the form of full articles papers and reports combined these contributions represent a considerable body of knowledge and some contemporary and up to date thinking about what it means to live in a surveillance society the issue of how increased security precautions impact on individual privacy is a crucial one for americans and many others around the world since 9 11 security surveillance and access to personal information by government and their agencies has increased and become in some people's eyes more intrusive and unacceptably controlling and monitoring to understand the full range and potential impact of these changes it is necessary to look across a very wide spectrum of data and opinion this is not a subject that simply looking at the media can provide a balanced view of there are many international agencies and organizations academic institutions experts and other knowledgeable individuals with valid and informed views who can contribute to the debate it is impossible to represent the whole gamut of argument but a selection of articles can help to understand both sides of the issue from 9 11 to the snowden leaks stories about surveillance increasingly dominate the headlines but surveillance is not only done to us it is something we do in everyday life we submit to surveillance believing we have nothing to hide or we try to protect our privacy or negotiate the terms under which others have access to our data at the same time we participate in surveillance in order to supervise children monitor other road users and safeguard our property social media allow us to keep tabs on others as well as on ourselves this is the culture of surveillance this important book explores the imaginaries and practices of everyday surveillance its main focus is not high tech organized surveillance operations but our varied mundane experiences of surveillance that range from the casual and careless to the focused and intentional it insists that it is time to stop using orwellian metaphors and find ones suited to twenty first century surveillance from the circle or black mirror surveillance culture david lyon argues is not detached from the surveillance state society and economy it is informed by them he reveals how the culture of surveillance may help to domesticate and naturalize surveillance of unwelcome kinds and considers which kinds of surveillance might be fostered for the common good and human flourishing very short introductions brilliant sharp inspiring surveillance permeates every aspect of our lives today once a more limited and often remote aspect of social life today surveillance is central to political economic and everyday life every click on the keyboard every call text or email every purchase every contact with a doctor or the police or a government department each time you walk under a video camera or pass through a security check and in many other ways you are recorded identified traced and tracked who processes this free flowing data how and with what consequences is a critical question affecting everyone this is not an alien conspiracy it is the way today's digitally dependent world works surveillance is not inherently good or bad but neither is it neutral it urgently needs to be understood better because people's lives and life chances depend on it today surveillance is central to doing business meeting friends organizing governance maintaining security and being entertained surveillance requires not just exploration and understanding but ethical guidance and political debate how you get credit or welfare benefits or get on a no fly list or are ranked as a consumer depends on surveillance this very short introduction investigates how surveillance makes people visible how it grew to its present size and prevalence how it came to rely on technologies of data handling and how it developed its own cultural features throughout david lyon also considers the ethics of surveillance and explores its potential in prompting political struggles about the series the very short introductions series from oxford university press contains hundreds of titles in almost every subject area these pocket sized books are the perfect way to get ahead in a new subject quickly our expert authors combine facts analysis perspective new ideas and enthusiasm to make interesting and challenging topics highly readable in windows into the soul gary t marx sums up a lifetime of work on issues of surveillance and social control by disentangling and parsing the empirical richness of watching and being watched ultimately marx argues recognizing complexity and asking the right questions is essential to bringing light and accountability to the darker more iniquitous corners of our emerging surveillance society surveillance capital and resistance is a major contribution to current debates on the subjective experience of surveillance based on a large research project undertaken in a northern city in the uk and focusing mainly on the use of surveillance in the context of policing and security the book explores how a diverse range of social groups school children political protesters offenders unemployed people migrants and police officers experience and respond to being monitored by new surveillance technologies such as cctv surveillance cameras and computers the book interweaves surveillance theory with the work of pierre bourdieu to argue that the distribution of various forms of capital economic social cultural and symbolic in any given field operate as a range of goods or resources that structure the dynamics of surveillance practices and power relations including the ability to contest surveillance the term surveillance capital is introduced to refer to the tacit knowledge and everyday forms of cultural know how that allow surveillance subjects to contest surveillance in a variety of local and specific settings the book is essential reading for anyone that might be interested in how people experience and respond to the new surveillance measures currently used in the crime control field it will be key reading for students and academics interested in surveillance studies childhood studies media studies criminal justice and migration studies central state and non covert surveillance began in earnest at the start of the twentieth century by the start of the twenty first century the uk was one of the most surveilled societies on earth this groundbreaking volume by inga kroener analyses the particular combination of factors that have created this surveillance state kroener argues against the inevitability of the rise of cctv that is so often found in this literature to map out the early history of cctv tracing its development from a tool for education safety and transport during the 1950s to one of politics in the 1970s and 1980s to eventually become a tool of surveillance during the 1990s within this analysis the complex role of the public in allowing the widespread and rapid dissemination of cctv is discussed and the representation of cctv in the media is also studied this volume will be of interest to all scholars working in the fields of surveillance studies science technology and society departments and social historians more generally

in this book david lyon analyses the various contexts of surveillance activity and offers a balanced account of the influence electronic information systems have on the social order today
