excerpt from the age of homer mr paley and mr sayce have put forward their views with regard to the late age of the homeric poems that is of the texts of the iliad and the odyssey as we now have them from a critical examination of their language i would here wish to express in a few notes my further doubts with regard to the early date of the homeric poems founded on the knowledge they evince of the art of a late date before discussing the date of the art as it appears in the poems i shall endeavour to point out some evidences of the rudeness and imperfection of greek civilization and language in the seventh century about a century and a half after the supposed date of homer i must in the first place confess myself a thorough sceptic with regard to the early date usually assigned to the iliad in its present form and i accept the theories so convincingly put forward by mr paley the mythology the art and science the language appear far too advanced for an early period of literature the mythology is too grand the conceptions too magnificent for that period the archaisms seem too often unreal imitative and affected besides the arts which would have been required to carry out the conception of the shield of achilles would have been enough to task the genius of a phidias from what we know of the rudeness of greek art in the seventh and sixth centuries b c there is every reason to believe about the publisher forgotten books publishes hundreds of thousands of rare and classic books find more at forgottenbooks com this book is a reproduction of an important historical work forgotten books uses state of the art technology to digitally reconstruct the work preserving the original format whilst repairing imperfections present in the aged copy in rare cases an imperfection in the original such as a blemish or missing page may be replicated in our edition we do however repair the vast majority of imperfections successfully any imperfections that remain are intentionally left to preserve the state of such historical works
