how do ideologies shape international relations in general and middle eastern countries relations with the united states in particular the clash of ideologies by mark l haas explores this critical question haas s central claim is that leaders ideological beliefs are likely to have profound effects on these individuals perceptions of international threats these threat perceptions in turn shape leaders core security policies including choices of allies and enemies and efforts to spread their ideological principles abroad as a key means of advancing their interests two variables are particularly important in this process the degree of ideological differences dividing different groups of decision makers ideological distance and the number of prominent ideologies that are present in a particular system ideological polarity the argument is tested in four case studies of states foreign policies primarily since the end of the cold war iran saudi arabia syria and turkey as the argument predicts ideological differences in these cases were a key cause of international conflict and ideological similarities a source of cooperation moreover different ideological groups in the same country at the same time often possessed very different understandings of their threat environments and thus very different foreign policy preferences these are findings that other prominent international relations theories particularly realism cannot explain the purposes of the book go beyond advancing theoretical debates in the international relations literature it also aims to provide policy guidance on key international security issues these prescriptions are designed to advance america s interests in the middle east in particular namely how u s leaders should best respond to the ideological dynamics that exist in the region the war on terror tends to circumscribe crucial developments in the islamic world within a narrow definition of islamic terrorism this partial and incomplete perspective fails to comprehend the links between today s scenario and the iranian revolution of 1979 a revolution fought in the name of god and spearheaded by religious scholars it is vital to examine the relationship between religious and revolutionary ideologies and the revolutionary potentials of islamic teachings in a penetrating new study najibullha lafraie examines how revolutionary ideologies function and applies these insights to the quran and its interpreters in the vanguard of the iranian revolution by unpacking these discourses lafraie develops and refines the concept of a quranic revolutionary ideology the ideology of the islamic revolution delineates the different ways in which the quran was used to mobilise action in 1979 and in so doing provides a context for understanding today s islamist movements this book presents a new and different approach to the subject of political ideologies it is intended both to stimulate thought and discussion and to serve as a comprehensive foundation for study michael oakshott described conservatism as a non ideological preference for the familiar tried actual limited near sufficient convenient and present historically conservatives have been associated with attempts to sustain social harmony between classes and groups within an organic hierarchical order grounded in collective history and cultural values yet in recent decades conservatism throughout the english speaking world has been associated with radical social and economic policy often championing free market models which substitute the free movement of labour and forms of competition and social mobility for organic hierarchy and noblesse oblige the radical changes associated with such policies call into question the extent to which contemporary conservatism is conservative rather than ideological this book seeks to explore contemporary conservative political thought with regard to such topics as one nation politics and big society sovereignty multiculturalism and international blocs paternalism and negative liberty with regard to narcotics pornography and education regional and international development and public faith establishment and religious diversity this book will be published as a special issue of global discourse
